Message from the Vice-Chancellor

I am pleased to learn that the fourth edition of the AWU Newsletter is published.

Our University is currently playing a positive role by catering to the students of the periphery areas by providing quality education specially to the economically backward classes in the region. Our mission is to increase students' employability as well as their self employment, promoting social awareness, human rights, universal brotherhood and community development activities through various inclusive practices. NEP:2020 implementation is on the horizon and our university is gearing up to streamline and adopt its various recommendations. I take this opportunity to affirm that Assam Women's University is committed to the development of knowledge and skills necessary in the present world, apart from taking appropriate care on the goals and outcomes of the core courses.

Editorial

Assam Women's University has just completed eight years of its existence. In terms of academics, the university is entering a new phase of growth as the institution has successfully organized quite a few workshops related to various disciplines. In addition, the university has constituted departmental Boards of Studies, Academic Council and Executive Council. Administratively, the university is positioning itself in a flexible and decentralized manner to maximize the potential of its workforce. The faculty too is constantly updating themselves as they have regularly attended comprehensive workshops, programmes and seminars in institutions near and far. Blended mode of education, aided by improvements in internet speed and reach, is changing the way regular classroom education takes place. In the days to come, both teachers and students will be better off adapting and making maximum use of this changed educational ecology. While preparing this newsletter, we are thankful to the honourable Vice Chancellor and Registrar for constantly pushing us to do better and produce a quality newsletter. We are also thankful to all our colleagues and staff for their kind coordination and help in making this newsletter ready in time.

... the university is positioning itself in a flexible and decentralized manner to maximize the potential of its workforce.
